From: Galli Produce Co. Inc.

Food Safety Director.

The recent Ecoli outbreak possibly involving Romaine Lettuce products from Yuma Arizona is unconfirmed as to implicating any Growers at this time.

That being said, the Romaine products distributed from Galli produce have been from Salinas.

Furthermore, the last reported illness was recorded October 31st .

It is doubtful that anyone has product that is 26 days old which would be more like 35 days taking harvest and shipping into consideration.

We will monitor this and let you know if a Class III Recall should need to be performed regarding Salinas Product.

A Class III Recall is a situation where product is Life Threatening and must be taken from the market place immediately.
